20 Students Graduate At Dr. Swift's

Eucharistic Congress Committees To Meet In St. Paul May 17

ST. PAUL — Chairmen and members of the 17 committees working on plans for the St. Paul Diocesan Congress to be held in the Cathedral Parish, July 8, 9 and 10 will meet in St. Paul on Tuesday, May 17 at the Public School Cafeteria to give a progress report of what has been accomplished so far — discuss new problems and make recommendations where necessary.

The Eucharistic Congress is primarily being organized as a religious festival re - affirming faith in God, keep in mind the precepts of the Catholic religion in a diocese-wise concentration of religious festivities.

In the words of Cardinal Pacelli —Piux XII: "To celebrate a Eucharistic Congress means to raise a spiritual basilica in honor of Jesus living amongst men. No material temple, no matter how vast, no monumental basilica can now hold the multitudes quivering with love and faith, who hasten to our Eucharistic Congresses . . . Who—even with out seeing them—was not moved with a holy emotion at the sole account of the marvels told after each of these Eucharistic gatherings? — What is a Congress? It is a gathering around the throne of Christ, the immortal King of Ages . . . It is a participation in His ineffable Banquet."

The Eucharistic Congress will bring to the Episcopal town of St. Paul Roman Catholics from 40 parishes in the diocese and will be a spectacle involving over 10,000 persons.

The St. Paul Diocese includes such major centres as Bonnyville, Cold Lake, Westlock, Barrhead, Morinville, Lac la Biche, Smoky Lake and affiliated parishes.

His Excellency Philippe Lussier C.Ss.R. Bishop of St. Paul is head of the organization. Special invitations have been sent out to the church hierarchy and it is expected some five Bishops and Archbishops along with Papal representative will be here.

General Bank Clerk Change Takes Place

LAC LA BICHE — It would appear to be "general bank clerk change" as far as the two local banks are concerned. The new accountant Melvin Klassen, who replaced Stan Gasior at the Imperial Bank, arrived from Rosthern, Sask., a few days ago. Eddie Stratichuk, who has been teller at the same bank, received a transfer to Lethbridge and left May 5. Victor Michetti has now joined the staff of the Imperial Bank.

The new accountant at the Treasury Branch is Herb Lenz and he comes here from Ponoka.

Hylo

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kevega and Daniel of Newbrook were visitors Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Zalewsky.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Meardi made a trip to Edmonton last Saturday to see Richard Meardi who underwent surgery.

Nick Mahowich came home to visit his wife and family last week.

RUSSIAN geography professor Julian Saushkin, in Toronto, for an education conference, likened Siberia to Canada. "The spring flowers are blooming in southern Siberia just as they are in Canada," he said.

Slate Of Officers Re-elected At Meet

The annual meeting of the Plamondon and district nurses' home was held at Plamondon.

Although all districts were notified the attendance was small, about 20 persons in all. The report of the year was read by Arthur Dube. Some discussions took place.

The same slate of officers was returned for the coming year.

Mrs. Signi Genaud, municipal nurse, gave an interesting talk and gave reasons why the public should take more interest in the activities of the nurses' home committee. She gave detailed figures on how the taxpayers' money is being spent with regard to the municipal nursing service.

Teaches School In Area 40 Years, V. Walch Honored At Presentation

LAC LA BICHE—The Students' Union of the Dr. Swift High school held its annual banquet honoring the 1960 graduating class in the Memorial Hall May 5. Twenty graduates and their parents, as well as members of the teaching staff, school officials, clergy and other guests, enjoyed a banquet convened by Mrs. J. Hayduk, prepared by the mothers of the junior class and served by the juniors. The hall was decorated with garlands of red and white roses and an added attraction was a wishing well in the centre of the room.

Toastmaster for the evening was H. Senetza, vice-principal of the high school.

Those having a part in the program during the evening were: Marjorie Smolarchuk, who proposed a toast to the graduates; Phyllis Kozak, reply; Josephine Fornari, a toast to the teachers; reply, F. McMillan; Clara Munawich, toast to the parents; reply, Mrs. Watamanuik; Morris Linnell and Larry Meardi, class history; Lyn Watamanuik, valedictorian.

Mr. Chodan in his genial manner, introduced the guest speaker, S. N. Odanyk, superintendent of the Lac la Biche School division.

A special feature of the evening was the presentation to the Lac la Biche High school, in honor of a long-time teacher in Lac la Biche, Miss Vera Walch, a complete set of Encyclopaedia Britannica. In making the presentation J. Williams, chairman of the divisional board, stated, "We have here a complete set of Encyclopaedia Britannica. Volumes such as these have been donated by Encyclopaedia Britannica Co. of Canada Ltd., to each and every qualified English speaking and bilingual High school in Canada, that is, one having at least one classroom for each grade, and preparing students to enter Canadian universities.

"When considering the number of High schools across the Dominion, almost 1,700, this is a gesture of rare benevolence. Encyclopaedia Britannica is recognized in Canada as the supreme book of knowledge, therefore, this fine reference set is a most welcome addition to our school library and will, no doubt, create greater enthusiasm toward study amongst our young student people.

"When being advised by Kurt R. Swinton, president of Encyclopaedia Britannica of Canada Ltd., that the books were being shipped, he at the same time suggested that it would be appropriate to mark the occasion of the presentation by honoring some one in the area who had made outstanding contribution toward the education of our young people.

"The school board, in consultation with the superintendent and the secretaries, conversed only briefly and agreed that we could do no better than honor one who has taught school in the area continuously for 40 years, and for the past 17 years in the town of Lac la Biche, and is now teaching her second generation of pupils and is well on the way toward teaching the third generation.

"Ladies and gentlemen, on behalf of Encyclopaedia Britannica of Canada Ltd., it gives me great pleasure to present this magnificent gift to the Dr. Swift High School in honor of, and in the name of Miss Vera Walch."

Miss Walch thanked the board for its thoughtfulness of this honor and expressed her interest in the teaching profession.

In his remarks, Mr. Odanyk praised the students who were graduating. He stated that learning is a never-ending process and that the students should remember that there is no ultimate goal at the end of the road but that they should continue on and on in search of knowledge. He warned against the practices, so rampant today, of seeking to get something for nothing and said that the practice of give-away programs, stifles the individual's desire for achievement. He reminded his listeners that empires rise and fall and that history does repeat itself and that, in many cases, mankind has lost his initiative to work. Mr. Odanyk said he believed the answer to the problems confronting us today lies in education. "Every person has his own place to fill in the world," he stated, "and we should not mollycoddle our children." After swinging so far in trying to educate "the whole child," the pendulum is swinging back to the more traditional teaching, he noted, with the emphasis on accumulating knowledge with meaning.

Mr. Odanyk declared that an Academic education was not suitable for everyone but it would no doubt take a long time to change the system and institute more vocational training schools.

He commended the graduates for their attainments thus far and encouraged them to launch forth to fulfill their dreams and to seek new hopes and new horizons.

Following the supper the graduates and their escorts assembled for the grand march. The young ladies, charming in their beautiful gowns complemented by dark rose corsages, and the young men in dark suits presented a delightful picture as they slowly marched the length of the hall to the music of Saur's Orchestra.

Photos were taken of the group as they posed on the platform where they received scrolls presented by Principal McMillan. Class prophecies of each student were read when they had received their scroll.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

Some of you have met Mrs. L. C. Johnson, the Clothing Instructor at the Vermilion School of Agriculture. She will be available for demonstrations and clinics after May 27 (except the last two weeks of July). The following is a list of topcis of demonstrations which Mrs. Johnson is prepared to take:

B. McCutcheon

1. Millinery — this is a one afternoon demonstration. Instructions regarding supplies required to make hats can be given, and a clinic held later if convenient. During the one afternoon demonstration you may bring old hats made of felt, straw, or buckram, to use as samples for ideas as to how they may be made over.

2. Textile Painting (demonstration only).

3. Copper Tooling and Aluminum and Copper Etching.

4. Drawn Thread Work.

5. Huckweaving and Cross Stitch.

6. Basketry — small practice kit can be purchased ahead of time.

7. Mosaic Work — this is an expensive craft, e.g. a trivet would cost about $2.50 to buy the materials ,although there would be some material left over for other crafts.

8. Upholstering a Kitchen Chair with plastic (the group would be responsible for supplying the chair and plastic — must be heavy gauge).

9. Create your own Handicraft Design (samples—and practice in making border designs).

10. Make your own Jewellery (this will include samples and ideas as well as instruction if desired, e.g. copper etching (bracelets) copper enameling, seed work, ceramic (clay baked in oven), etc.)

It would be most convenient if a series of consecutive demonstrations and clinics could be arranged for this area. We must share Mrs. Johnson with the rest of northern Alberta.

If your group is interested, would you let me know as soon as possible.

THE SECRET OF YOUTH

By Dr. K. W. Tenove, Chiropractor

Alfred J. Waterhouse thinks he has found the secret of youth. He says:

Life taught me her lesson, I hold it as truth—
That a smile in the heart is the secret of youth,
For age cannot harm nor do him a wrong
Who whistles a bit as he journeys along.
The face becomes wrinkled, the hair becames gray,
But the heart may keep young till the end of the way.
Forever and ever there standeth this truth—
A smile in the heart is the secret of youth.

Truly it has been said, as a man thinketh in his heart so is he. Success or defeat is largely a matter of thought. When you think you are beaten, you are, but when faith is strong, when the will to win predominates, nothing can defeat the courageous person, and he will stay young as long as his thoughts are happy and inspirational. Be of good cheer for the Kingdom of God is within, and God is eternal youth.

Of course, other things are important. You must have vision, you must have a goal, you must believe in yourself and in God, but you also must work.

Someone has said, "Work fascinates me, I can sit and look at it for hours." That sort of inspiration doesn't help. It is an axiom that prayer without work is dead. It is probably equally true that work without prayer availeth little. Certainly when the two go hand in hand with the joy of living in your heart, you stay younger in spirit and in truth.

It is naturally important that you have health if you would retain youth, but health is a natural thing that is yours almost for the asking when you are in tune with the laws of life and keep the way clear within for normal expression.

All functions of the body are directed and controlled through the nervous system. Chiropractors maintain that the spine is the key to this system and therefore, the key to health because the spinal column encases the spinal cord and serves as the distributing centre for all the trunk nerves of the body.

In the human anatomy, as is true of every vertebrate animal, all nerve trunks make exit from the spinal cord through openings between the vertebrae. It follows, therefore, that the spine must be in normal alignment else nerves will be pinched where they make exit from the spine. When nerve interference occurs, resistance is lowered, function is disturbed and in time some form of disease results.

The Doctor of Chiropractic is trained to locate these spinal misalignments and to make skillful adjustments with their hands to correct the basic spinal cause. This done, the healing forces within make repairs and health returns, making possible a youthful attitude and a more abundant life.

Smoky Lake Legion Turns Over Two Titles To Village Officials

The village council was the proud recipient of two titles for land from the Smoky Lake Branch No. 227 of the Canadian Legion at the council's last meeting.

The land, valued at slightly more than two thousand, was acquired by the branch from British American Oil Company some five years ago. Recently it also negotiated a deal with J. M. Romanchuk for a lot and a half, which when consolidated with the other three lots, will be used by the village as a site for a large and modern community recreation centre.

Blue prints are almost complete and the work should get underway in the near future.

The building, when completed, will have club rooms, a four-sheet curling rink, regional library, town office, public washroom facilities, waiting room and kitchen facilities.

Part of the cost will be borne by the provincial recreational special grant and the rest by the village, the chamber of commerce, the Legion branch, the Lions, and the curling club.

TIPS FOR PARENTS

By EDITH HENRY
(Parent Education Associates)

"WE who must enforce the law are charged with stemming the tide of crime. That is our job.

"But the tide of juvenile crime will become overwhelming unless preventive action is taken in the one place where it can do the most good—the home."

This conclusion is drawn by J. Edgar Hoover of the U.S. Department of Justice. He adds—

"Criminals are not born with the stamp of criminality affixed to them. They are created by the forces and influences surrounding them.

"Certainly parental influence is vital.

"What is society to do when parents abdicate their responsibility?"

PUNISH PARENTS?

In the United States there has been some focus on punishing the parent of the delinquent as a solution to the problem.

A number of states have enacted laws relating to the responsibilities of parents in connection with juvenile misbehavior.

As a result judges have been able to impose suspended sentences or to mete out fines to parents.

The family of two teenage girls, for example, were fined $600 towards the repair necessary following vandalism at school.

Is this "punish the parent" policy a solution to the curbing of juvenile delinquency?

MIXED RESULTS

Michigan reports good results. "It has made parents watch over their children more closely. Vandalism has dropped 60% (between 1953-56).

Other states including New York and Ohio say, "It is no panacea."

Most experts on delinquency, judges, probation officers, educators, etc., disagree with the policy.

"It's an easy way out," they say. "It gives the children the stigma of "jailbird" parents.

"It makes love scarce where it should be abundant. It gives the delinquent a club over his parents."

There has been the odd mention of trying out this course in Canada where we are faced with the same problem.

Laws once made are hard to break. We should be sure before we proceed.

As a member of our Canadian society are you for or against punishing the parent?

Supreme Court Reserves Gas Rate Decision

The appellate division of the Alberta Supreme Court reserved decision on an appeal by Edmonton and three other communities against a ruling of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners which resulted in increased natural gas rates.

Edmonton, Red Deer, Jasper Place and Vegreville contested a board decision allowing Northwestern Utilities Ltd. to recover a 1959 deficiency of $2,817,927.

Edmonton city solicitor William Sinclair said the board was acting outside its jurisdiction in granting Northwestern's application.

George Bryan, counsel for Jasper Place, said consumers should not suffer because Northwestern received a rate of return less than the allowed 7½ per cent. He said Northwestern like any business should shoulder its risks instead of "placing them in the lap of consumers."

Northwestern said the money collected was merely revenue Northwestern would have received had the rates granted Sept. 1 been in effect at the first of the year.

The appellants maintained the board had no authority to grant Northwestern the right to recover any losses prior to Sept. 1, 1959.

DA Wonders Why Area Farmers Don't Use More Free Trees

The spring being the time of year when thoughts naturally turn to planting things, thoughts turned to the tree-planting program which George Godel, district agriculturist, has been conducting during the past few years. In reply to a question, Mr. Godel said the trees for 1960 should be arriving at any time, in order they could be planted before spring work.

When asked about quantity, Mr. Godel said the number of trees is increasing every year, and there should be 46,493 trees and shrubs in the shipment, made up as follows: all evergreens, 2,185; elms, 210; maple, 3,150; willow, 230; rooted Russian poplar, 1,100; ash, 25; honeysuckle, 5,372; caragana, 33,105; mixed ornamentals, 1,116.

In comparison with 1959, Mr. Godel said there were 42,759 trees received that year. There were less honeysuckle and twice as many poplars and a great deal more ash.

In regard to cost, Mr. Godel explained the trees are free, absolutely, excepting for payment of express charges, which do not amount to too much as the trees are in bulk. Trees come from the Department of Agriculture nurseries at Oliver, with the exception of the ornamentals. These come from the Alberta Government Horticulture Station at Brooks. These are mostly for hedge planting and in order not to compete with established nurseries, do not include fancy varieties.

The fact that the trees are free make it difficult to understand why more farmers do not avail themselves of the service—46,000 trees seem a goodly number, Mr. Godel continued, but these are only going to 59 farms out of about 1,600 in the county and the Smith district. The situation is even worse since 30 of the 59 are Farm and Home and Service Board members. This is a coverage of 40-50% for Farm and Home and Service Board and 1.9 per cent for other farms.

The same situation prevailed last year in a similar manner when 33.3% went to Farm and Home and Service Board members, and 1.8% to others. The next question was how many trees have been put in the area since Dave Ure established the Oliver Nurseries? Mr. Godel replied: "I have not the details for the first year or two, but since 1952, up to and including 1960, the total of 287,606 trees have been distributed as follows: evergreen, 13,286; elm, 5,636; maple, 20,187; willows, 4,345; Russian poplar, 13,-161; green ash, 9,606; caragana, 201,553; ornamentals, 10,514, to a total of 227 farms. These were divided among 62 Farm and Home and Service Boards and the 164 non-F. & H. and the Meanook Observatory, which is listed separately since it took 18,000 trees."

Here again, continued Mr. Godel, 75.9% of the potential Farm and Home received trees while only 10.8% of the non-F. & H. availed themselves of the service.

The nine year cumulative record of tree shipment covers 371 orders in 1,115 lots.

The logical question next, was why does the Farm and Home order so many more, are they favored in any way? Not at all, was the reply, the reason is that they all have a long term program which includes farmstead development, protection of roads from snowdrifts and a general beautifying program. Any farmer who wants trees is very welcome with us, continued Mr. Godel, and we will be very glad to call at the place of anyone who so requests to make suggestions regarding windbreaks, shelterbelts, snow traps, and to help in any way with the orders. It is naturally too late now for 1960 trees, but is suggested any farmer interested in getting trees in 1961 write us, or call at the office requesting a farm visit for the purpose of getting trees.

"Since the nurseries work on a first come, first served basis, those who order first get the best choice and since we run a rather busy office it is suggested that people who want to see us do not delay in contacting us but do so at once."

In conclusion Mr. Godel said: "A goal of 500,000 trees a year for ten years would not be ambitious in view of the fact that the efficiency of our educational program (centralized schools) depends to a considerable extent on the smooth running of school vans. We have been very fortunate these last few years to be free of major snow storms and bad snow drifts but we cannot ride good luck too long. With the county policy of school vans calling at every farm, it is imperative every farmer do his utmost to keep his roads free from drifts. This will mean the planting of caragana or honeysuckle back in the fields some suitable distance from the road. Where the power line is 40 feet or more from the road, the planting of caragana or honeysuckle under the power line is to be encouraged."

Mr. Godel further explained the caragana and honeysuckle would not grow tall enough to interfere with the efficiency of the power lines.

The tree planting program is a vital part of the campaign the Department of Agriculture is waging against soil erosion, snow drifting and conservation.

The Three Faces Of Eve

Chapter 12

By Corbett H. Thigpen, M.D. and Hervey M. Cleckley, M.D.

After approximately seven months of experience with Jane and more than a year and a half with two Eves, we prepared our report of this case for the American Psychiatric Association meeting, and also a longer article, published later in the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology.

What, we asked ourselves, was the meaning of these events we had observed? Many laymen are inclined to believe that most claims of amnesia are simply pretense or fraud by which the claimant hopes to evade responsibility for some objectionable or anti-social act.

When our newspapers carry an account of some man who has been missing for a week and, returning, tells his wife he has no memory of what occurred, the reader will often grin and wonder to himself if it were a blonde or a brunette with whom this husband slipped off.

There is no doubt that the claim of amnesia is often spurious. A large percentage of all persons charged with serious criminal acts whom we have examined over the last 20 years have grasped at this ancient excuse. Most police officers consider it a corny ruse. In only a very few of the many claimants is there reasonable evidence of a true disturbance of consciousness.

AROUSES SUSPICIONS

The concept of multiple personality at once arouses similar suspicions.

If Eve White is an unhappy wife sharply curtailed in her activities restricted by her moral standards from seeking various pleasures and frivolities, what could be nicer for her than to simulate a dual personality?

By so doing she can, the casual observer may say, have her cake and eat it too. By asuming the role of Eve Black she can evade her responsibilities and all or any prohibitions of her moral code. She can live it up as Eve Black and then return to her status as the innocent wife and mother without troubling her conscience. Who would not find such an arrangement remarkably convenient? Could undiluted hypocrisy ever reach greater depths?

It seemed of some importance to us to learn how other observers would react to what we had so long been studying. All three of the ladies with whom we were dealing agreed readily to appear before the Dugas Journal Club, a group of approximately 40 physicians, psychologists, chemists, and allied workers from the faculty of the Medical College of Georgia, the staff of the University Hospital, and the local Veterans Administration Psychiatric Hospital.

EVE WHITE FIRST

It was Eve White who was presented first at this gathering. She gave a synopsis of her medical history and replied to questions asked by many serious students of the biologic sciences.

Then Eve Black was produced in the swift metamorphosis now familiar to us, but which brought, with audible intake of the breath, this group to vivid attention. Jane was presented later and similarly examined.

For approximately two hours the three ladies answered questions & participated in a discussion with the group, each displaying the characteristics and idiosyncrasies so distinctly her own. It was our wish that these exacting observers attempt to discover any artifice we might have overlooked.

TO THE DOCTORS' surprise, the psychological tests indicated that Jane was the "original" personality, and also the most puzzling.—Illustration from the 20th Century-Fox motion picture "The Three Faces of Eve."

In this sober setting, where it had long been the custom to weigh dispassionately grave biologic questions, a sense of drama steadily grew. All three of the characters remained unchanged during the prolonged cross-questioning. Not one could be thrown off balance by any stratagem or sudden ruse. From none emerged a word, act, or gesture inconsistent with her separate identity.

QUICK REPLIES

One experienced clinician who asked Jane about an event that occurred almost a year previously received this reply, "But, Doctor, you forget that I am only seven months old!"

Another physician, speaking with Eve Black, asked some questions about Eve White's reactions that implied they must after all be her own. When this was denied he said, "But surely you share some of her feelings. You are, in a sense, twins, aren't you?"

With a quick snap of her eyes, she replied emphatically, "But not identical twins."

At approximately this point in their careers our three personality manifestations were each for the first time given the semantic differential test, a relatively new exploratory device until then unfamiliar to us.

Dr. J. McV. Hunt, editor of the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology, to whom we submitted our report, kindly suggested this step. He pointed out that it would be interesting, and possibly helpful to have the results of such tests interpreted by psychologists unfamiliar with the case history, by workers with no information about the characteristics of Eve White, Eve Black, and Jane as they had appeared to us.

ANALYSIS MADE

We were, and are, most grateful to Dr. Hunt for this opportunity and also to Osgood and Luria who devised this test and carried out the blind analysis of the material we obtained separately from the three personalities.

The test contains 15 significant concepts: Love, Child, My Doctor, Me, My Job, Mental Sickness, My Mother, Peace of Mind, Fraud, My Spouse, Self-Control, Hatred, My Father, Confusion, Sex. The patient places each of these items in a scale indicating judgment between two contrasting evaluations such as valuable-worthless, deep-shallow, tasty-distasteful, active-passive, etc. The scale gives seven choices of degree for the estimate to be indicated between the two extremes as shown in this example:

My Father active .....:.....:.....:.....:X.:.....:.....: passive.

My Father soft .....:X.:.....:.....:.....:.....:.....: hard.

The results of the test lead Osgood and Luria to estimate Jane and Eve White as "socialized" personalities. They differ chiefly from each other in their responses to the concepts Me, My Spouse, and Sex—Eve White's reactions suggesting a negative critical attitude, Jane's suggesting their acceptance as positive values. "Eve Black," they report, "shows gross differences on almost all concepts."

"SELF-ASSURED"

Judged solely by the tests, Eve Black appears to be "clearly the most out of contact with social reality and simultaneously the most self-assured." She is described as accepting socially disapproved attitudes as "perfectly legitimate," as seeing "herself as a dominant, active wonder-woman," and as "in no way self-critical." Of Eve Black, Osgood and Luria also say, "Like a completely selfish infant, this personality is entirely oriented around the assumption of its own perfection."

To our surprise, interpretation of the test indicated Jane as "the 'original' personality, in the sense of being most characteristic of the woman her friends and relatives knew . . ." She also appeared to be "the most puzzling of the three personalities." She is described as "superficially . . . a very healthy personality: 'all's well with the world and I'm getting better and better.' "

There are indications that she finds the chief people in her life admirable and effective and reacts to "all socially approved modes of action as good, strong, and passive."

The analysis of her test suggests that Jane may be "an essentially strong, healthy, and improving ego-dominated personality," but some points indicate that through self-deception she may have "woven a web of repression as to the state of reality," that the promising features in her performance may be misleading.

TWO INTERPRETATIONS

Two possible interpretations of Jane, according to the test, become possible, one offering much hope, the other strongly suggesting that what is most encouraging about her may be quite insubstantial. "In any case,' they conclude, "we doubt if Jane would have either come for therapy or have been institutionalized—as such."

If we keep in mind the fact that Osgood and Luria had no information about this patient, some of these estimates, based solely on what each of the personalities scored in the test, seem remarkably accurate. To be sure, they have been informed that she is a woman, that her disorder is that of multiple personality, that there is a husband and a child, that her mother is living, and that she has a job outside the home. Nothing else about the patient, who lives almost a thousand miles away, was accessible to them.

The uncertainty about Jane and her potentialities, which the test results bring up, is a point of great significance. Is she, despite her superficial promise, a figment too good to be true? Are her healthiness and her apparent capacity for a full life little more than thin formalities, something less than real?

If we are wrong about Jane, the prognosis for our patient becomes poor indeed. Or is the alternative (second) estimate of Jane, offered tentatively from the test results, more likely to prove correct? Is Jane merely a two-dimensional mirage of the true and fine feminine image that emerged and convinced us of its incipient reality?

NEXT WEEK: What happened when Eve Black went to Jacksonville with Ralph White. (From the book "The Three Faces of Eve", copyright 1957 by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.). Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate.
